10. Leadership – Managerial Skills and Abilities

Lecturer: Ing. Yvona Charouzdová, DBA

Module Annotation

Leadership as a style of leading people.

In today's business world, we have an interesting number of people in leadership roles. But the question is how they manage to successfully lead teams of people. Recently, in practice, I see that we have a large number of directive bosses who do not have leadership under their skin and do not want this. But I'm an optimist and I believe that the situation will soon change.

For over twenty years I have been trying to find the relevant answer to the question of who is the right leader along with top-level managers. I have to admit that this long-term research has continually provided me with interesting findings over the years. When asked whether respondents see a difference between a leader and a manager, I sometimes receive a variety of answers - from the professional to the surprisingly naive. Up to those, when talking about this discipline is useless, because in practice it doesn't work anyway!?

Often in the Czech Republic, the name of the position and the content of the word "leader" are confused. So what is it really like regarding leadership? Leadership is all about attitudes.

"Reason and calm reasoning are qualities worthy of a leader."

Tacitus

Is this topic a reality or is it just a fad?

Module Objective

Apply the principles of leadership in practice.
